FUEL TAX FUND AVAILABLE TO 11 BOROUGH, 21 TOWNSHIPS

The Adams county commissioners today announced a $26,003.54 is available for distribution to the various townships under the county aid program. The money comes from the liquid fuel tax and is available to 21 townships and 11 boroughs in the county.

Distribution of the sum is, as usual, on a mileage and population basis so that areas of large population, but with small mileage in roads, will not be penalized. To obtain the money the districts apply to the commissioners and after the work on the roads is completed and approved by the department of highways the commissioners make the payment to the township supervisors or borough councils.

When any district fails to make a claim for the amount it is eligible to receive, the money is carried over to the next year and distributed among townships and boroughs making application then. Clarence C. Smith, commissioners clerk, said.

Amounts Available
The amounts available to the various districts are: Abbottstown, $185.53; Arendtsville, $165.73; Bendersville, $176.62; Berwick township, $435.36; Biglerville, $278.59; Butler township, $1,088.19; Conewago township, $829.47; Cumberland township, $1,230.31; East Berlin, $301.36; Fairfield, $182.23; Franklin township, $1,840.31; Freedom township, $387.71; Germany township, $633.12; Gettysburg, $2,072.28; Hamilton township, $648.58; Hamiltonburg township, $1,001.52; Highland township, $454.68; Huntingdon township, $1,354.10; Latimore township, $1,084.99; Liberty township, $624.81; Littlestown, $872.79; McSherrystown, $762.24; Menallen township, $1,279.80; Mt. ## WORLEY WILL PRESENT FEPC MEASURE TODAY

Harrisburg, Jan. 17 (P)—The 1949 Legislature will get its first proposal for a fair employment practices commission today.

Rep. Francis Worley (R-Adams) said he plans to introduce a bill in the state House of Representatives which would create a five-member independent commission with authority to halt any job discrimination due to race, creed or color.

Gov. James H. Duff called for establishment of FEPC in his message opinion the 1949 session of the General Assembly after a similar plea was turned down by the Republican-controlled labor committee of the lower House two years ago.

Would Aid State Workers
Rep. Adam Bower (R-Northumberland), labor committee chairman, said he now favors a modified FEPC but is still against creation of an independent agency to regulate the hiring and firing of business concerns.

Worley said his measure is patterned after the FEPC law now in effect in New York. The chief difference, he said, is that the commonwealth and political subdivisions are included in the classification of employers.

The Adams county representative, who also will seek time-and-a-half pay for overtime by state workers, explained "I don't think the state should expect to get any different treatment than private employers."

Provides Fines
His FEPC measure would set up a commission with powers to establish regulations banning firings or refusal to hire due to race discrimination. Similar regulations would apply to employment agencies, labor unions and trade schools.

The five FEPC commissioners would be paid $10,000 a year with authority to hold hearings and issue orders against violations. A fine of $500 to $1,000 would be established as a penalty for violation of its orders.

Mrs. Stoops was sentenced by the Adams county courts in 1946 to serve six to 12 months on a charge of perjury, and in December of 1948 asked for a full pardon.

Japanese Educator Relates His Experience In Atomic Bombing Of Hiroshima At Services Here

There was a weird, arching purplish flash of lightning, brighter than the sun. When next he knew anything he was in total darkness. His legs were pinned under something and dirt and debris covered his body. Nearby he could hear someone groaning feebly.

Thus Doctor Takuo Matsumoto, principal of the Methodist Girls' School in Hiroshima, told of the dropping of the first atom bomb on that Japanese city.

Speaking at the regular Methodist-Presbyterian Sunday evening church here, the Japanese educator described his own personal feelings, emotions and discoveries the day the atom bomb was unleashed on the world.

August 6, 1945 dawned as a "glorious day," Doctor Matsumoto recalled. The 300 high school girls who attended the Methodist school left early with their teachers for the center of the city where they were to help remove bomb debris from the streets of the city. Sixty-two first year college girls were gathered in the chapel at the school. Doctor Matsumoto was in his office, with another teacher standing near him. There was no air raid warning. No sound of a plane's motor. The city seemed peaceful and the war far away.

School Is Levelled

Suddenly there was the blinding, purplish flare, the educator recalled. "The next thing I knew I was in total darkness. My legs were pinned tight, my face, upper part of my body and my arms were covered, but I was able to move them. I heard the dying groans of my colleagues, who had been but six feet from me. I thought that I was about to die. Strangely enough I was not panic-stricken, but at peace. I moved my arms to brush some of the debris away from my face and saw a tiny opening above me. It took an hour for me to free my legs and work my way out of the debris. When I reached the top of the heap of rubble that had been the school building, I saw that nothing was standing. The school was in the heart of a well built residential section, but as far as I could see there was nothing standing—everything was flat."

He told of going to his home and finding it leveled, a mass of debris.

HIGHWAY MAIL SERVICE OPENS ON WEDNESDAY

A new era in the transportation of mail will be inaugurated Wednesday, when highway mail service between Lancaster and Harrisburg, with Gettysburg as one of its regular stops, begins its regular runs.

A trial run was made Sunday, and another today. The truck will make its third run Tuesday carrying mostly first day covers and cachets for collectors. The truck will be open for inspection Tuesday morning about 8:15 o'clock.

Just as railroad trains replaced the old Pony Express and the stagecoaches in carrying the mail, so now has the highway express replaced, in this instance, the railroads, through the discontinuance of passenger service on several lines.

Will Improve Service

The new system will mean a considerable improvement in the mail service at the Gettysburg post office, Postmaster Lawrence E. Oyler said. It will provide direct service between Gettysburg and Chambersburg, Gettysburg and York, and Gettysburg and other points.

The schedule calls for the highway mail truck to leave Lancaster daily at 4:15 a. m. It is due to reach Gettysburg at 7:15 a. m., on its trip to Harrisburg, reaching the latter city at 11 a. m. On the return trip, the truck will leave Harrisburg at 12 noon, arriving in Gettysburg at 3:20 p. m., and Lancaster at 7 p. m.

Open Second Route

The route of the Lancaster-Harrisburg run is through Columbia, Wrightsville, York, Spring Grove, Hanover, Littlestown, Gettysburg, Chambersburg, Shippensburg and Carlisle, to Harrisburg, returning by the same route.

A second highway mail route will be started between Lancaster and Washington, D. C., over the same route as far as Littlestown. From there it will proceed to Washington via Taneytown, Keymar, Ladysburg, New Midway, Legore, Woodsboro, Walkersville and Frederick.

TRAFFIC JAMS STOP ENGINES AT TWO FIRES

A two-story frame house two miles east of Bonneauville was badly damaged by fire Sunday morning, and an outbuilding on the farm of Perry Lincoln, near the White Run bridge off the Baltimore pike caught fire when a gasoline motor backfired Sunday afternoon. Gettysburg firemen were called to both blazes.

Mrs. Lincoln suffered severe burns on both hands from flaming gasoline. She was given first aid treatment by Gettysburg firemen.

Low Water Supply

The Sunday morning fire was at the home of Clayton Baker, Gettysburg R. 5, located on a dirt road to the left of the Bonneauville road. Bonneauville firemen were called first, and summoned other fire companies when their water supply began to run out. Besides Gettysburg, the Centennial and McSherrystown firemen were called. The call here was received at 10:50 a. m.

Firemen said the blaze was caused from an overheated stove pipe which went through the kitchen ceiling to a chimney in a second story bedroom. The fire was believed to have started in the interior of the house, but caused damage estimated at $2,500 from fire, smoke and water, exclusive of the damage of furniture and furnishings, firemen said.

County's Share In U.S. Taxes Is $8,779,000

An analysis of President Truman's proposed $41,858,000 federal budget for fiscal year 1950, beginning July 1, 1949, showed today that Pennsylvania's share of the cost in direct and hidden taxes would be $3,251,440,000 and Adams county's share would be $8,779,000.

These computations, made by the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce, were based on a three-point formula. The formula for the state's share took into account the amount of Federal tax collections in this state, the state's share of the national income, and population. In the case of counties, the factors used were: Population, buying income, and taxable payrolls under the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance program.

Figured on a per capita basis, Pennsylvania's share amounts to $309 for every man, woman and child in the state, and is equal to more than one-fifth of the income received from all sources by Pennsylvanians in 1947.

The total of $8,779,000 which residents of Adams county will be called on to pay as their share of Federal spending in the coming fiscal year is approximately 15 times greater than the total amount of local taxes levied in this county in 1946, the latest year for which complete figures are available. The 1946 local taxes levied in Adams county by all units, including county, cities, boroughs, townships, school districts and institutional districts, totaled $595,000.

ADMITS GUILT ON TREASON COUNT

New York, Jan. 17 (AP)—Martin Monti, 27-year-old former air force lieutenant, pleaded guilty today to treason charges.

The Florissant, Mo., resident was indicted last October 14 on charges he gave himself and his plane up to the Germans in Italy between October 13, 1944 and May 8, 1946 after going AWOL in Karachi, India.

The indictment alleged Monti volunteered his services to the Germans, was released as a prisoner of war and broadcast for the Nazis from Berlin as Martin Weithaupt. Subsequently, the indictment charges, Monti became an officer in the S.S. Elite guard.

After the Nazi capitulation, it was charged, Monti made his way to Italy and joined the American fifth army.

Some 150 talesmen had been called before Federal Judge Robert A. Inch at the start of trial today. Several witnesses from Germany were present in the court to testify for the government.

Jap Educator

to clear away the debris to rescue them. Fires were starting to break out, and he located about a dozen girls before the flames drove him off. Of the 50 who died in the chapel most burned to death, he estimated.

He then went to the center of the city to see about the high school girls. Some disappeared instantly when the bomb exploded. Others were badly hurt. Eventually every one of the 300 died from radiation effects and other injuries.

The smoke from the fires, and the cloud left by the atomic bomb produced a "whirlwind effect," he said, and there was a roar as of thousands of airplanes overhead. The populace became panic stricken, running to the river to avoid further attack. Doctor Matsumoto's wife and daughter, swept up by the panic stricken throng, also went into the river. His daughter was able to keep from being crushed under the surging mass of humanity. His wife has a weak heart and the shock, together with the shock of hitting the cold water, caused a coronary occlusion which resulted in her death.

Many Lose Parents

During the days that followed Hiroshima counted its dead. Of the surviving college girls 144 lost mothers, 149 lost fathers, five lost both parents.

One month after the explosion there were a tremendous number of deaths from radiation sickness, the Japanese educator recalled.

The speaker said he spent about a month in a hospital for radiation burns received from the bombing, but that he has completely recovered; his daughter, also completely recovered, has married a Christian doctor and now has a son.

Starts Another School

Four months after the bomb dropped, Doctor Matsumoto started another school with 100 girl students and five teachers. On August 6, 1947 a reeducation program was held at the school which had moved into temporary buildings on the site of the old school. Now the school has 1,600 students and 100 teachers.

Hiroshima could have been any city, he told his audience of more than 400. "The bomb, though it stopped one war, has not stopped all wars." More Christian education is the only hope if the world is to be saved from the bomb, he added.

The Japanese were resentful over the bomb and what it had done to them, the Japanese educator said after the formal talk. "but due to the wonderful way in which they were treated by the American soldiers, the magnificent manner in which General MacArthur has governed the country, and the thousands of food packages and other gifts sent by Americans to my people, the Japanese have become reconciled to the dropping of the bomb."

Rev. Clyde R. Brown, pastor-elect of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. Floyd Carroll, pastor of the Methodist church here were in charge of the joint service. Miss Dorothy Lowman sang as a solo "The Prayer Perfect."

In Gettysburg this morning Dr. Matsumoto read in a New York newspaper that his alma mater, Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, Ohio, will present him with the degree of doctor of laws on Wednesday. Dr. Matsumoto, who received his primary and secondary education in Japan, gained the B. A. degree at Ohio Wesleyan in 1914. He is now 60 years old and the author of several books and articles on the Bible and Christianity.

Hold Auto With Silver Fenders

Milan, Italy, Jan. 17 (AP)—Finance guards on the Swiss frontier said today they were detaining an American whose automobile has fenders of solid silver.

The guards at the village of Chiavenna identified him as Ettore Armando Russo, 38, native of Philadelphia and now a resident of Munich.

They said the fenders, lightly varnished, contained 308 pounds of silver. No charges were made, but investigation of the case will take several days, police said.

Bullets Nose Out Lafayette 60-58 In Extra Period Tilt; Frosh Trim Mercersburg Fives

It will be a long time before the capacity crowd forgets the Gettysburg college 60-58 extra period victory over the Lafayette courtmen here Saturday night. Many fans were turned away.

For thrills, excitement and tension the tilt perhaps stands alone in contests held here for a long time.

Trailing as much as nine points midway in the third period and by six points in the opening moments of the last period, after a see-saw battle in the first half, the Bullets allied gallantly in the last period to knot the count 53-53 at the end of the regulation game and then went on to win in the extra five-minute stanza.

With the crowd roaring and on its feet most of the fourth quarter the Bullets gradually caught up to the Leopards at 45-45 after three minutes of the last quarter. After another minute O'Brien sent the Bullets ahead on a foul. Love landed a short shot for the visitors and Davidson netted a long toss. Sachs hit on a short shot and Belber popped a side heave to send the Bullets in front 50-49 with 3½ minutes remaining. Marty Zippie, the outstanding performer of the evening, then landed his ninth field goal on a long shot and Davidson added a pair of free tosses.

Spine-Tingling Finish
The Bullets refused to collapse and O'Brien netted a long side shot, Belber knotted the count at 53-53 with a free toss with a little over a minute to play remaining.

Lafayette took possession of the ball and played a waiting game for a victory-winning goal stab. Just 30 seconds before the final whistle they made their bid and in a wild scramble near the basket Milne was fouled and was awarded a free toss. The clock showed about two seconds remaining when he blew the toss to send the game into an extra period.

The hectic extra period opened with Harris missing two free throws. Davidson and Pletcher landed fouls in that order. Zippie cut loose with another long shot and George Boehner matched it with a follow-up toss. Zippie again came through with less than a minute and a half remaining and Sachs duplicated and when Toul-d muffed the free toss.

Belber's Toss Decides
With half a minute to go Belber, in ex-player under Coach Anderson at Lower Merion, ripped the toss from about 15 feet out. A Lafayette player was detected running with the ball and the Bullets took over with a freeze act, twice turning down foul shots to retain possession.

All of the Bullet regulars shared in the sixth straight triumph with the lions' share going to Sachs and Belber. Boehner's work in the fourth and extra periods in securing possession of the ball played a big role in the triumph.

Zippie, Leopards ace set shot artist, stole the show. The husky visitors anded 11 goals on but 21 shots and eight of his goals came from beyond the foul line. He was ably assisted by

Ben Hogan $2,500
Winner In Tourney
Pebble Beach, Calif., Jan. 17 (AP)—Ben Hogan, the golfer they always have to beat for the big money, was back in the winner's circle again today. And with $2,500 more to show or it.

Stopped cold in his first tournament pitch of the year last week at Los Angeles, Hogan bounced back yesterday to bag the Bing Crosby invitational with an eight under par count of 208. More than 10,000 fans saw the windup. It was the largest gallery ever here.

He rigged up a 70 for the Cypress Point course; followed with a 68 at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club layout; and bucked a stiff wind to post a snappy 70 for the Great Pebble Beach championship course on his final round. Par for all three is 72.

In addition to taking top money of $2,000 in the pro division of the tournament, Hogan won an extra $500 when he and his partner, amateur John Dawson for Los Angeles, finished third in the pro-amateur best ball competition.

Phila. Eagles Are Bought By Syndicate
Philadelphia, Jan. 17 (AP)—The Philadelphia Eagles today belonged to a syndicate of 100 businessmen who bought the club for $250,000. The transaction was completed Saturday and Alexis Thompson, wealthy young New York sportsman who brought the Eagles in 1941, promptly left for New York without commenting on the sale of his National Football league champions. But the syndicate had plenty to say.

James P. Clark, trucking company head and president of the buying group, said that: "Civic pride and interest in the community have been the factors chiefly motivating the purchase. None of the club's new officers will receive any salary. We want this great Philadelphia sports enterprise to maintain its success and acquire the character of a true city project."

Johns Hopkins Five Will Engage Bullets

This evening Gettysburg college's high-flying basketball team will go after its seventh straight victory when it meets Johns Hopkins university in the local gymnasium.

Although the record of the Hopkins five is none too impressive, the Bullets cannot afford to let down against their Baltimore foe. The Bream-men are being hailed by the Associated Press as one of the top six teams in the state and at present are rated for post-season tournament play.

Harry Pure, who did valiant work against Lafayette Saturday despite being noticeably handicapped by his injured ankle, will again be available for part time duty.

At 7 o'clock the undefeated Bullet freshmen tangle with the strong St. Mary's Boys club of York and will be gunning for their fourth triumph.

Davidson, a smooth, one-handed shot.

Frosh Win Handily

Johnny Yoviosin's freshman varsity downed a good Mercersburg academy team in the preliminary tilt 67-47 after overcoming a lead by the visitors in the opening minutes.

In the afternoon the frosh "B" team encountered little trouble in disposing of the Mercersburg "B" cagers 68-27.

RATE BULLETS AMONG 6 BEST STATE QUINTS

(By the AP)
A half dozen Pennsylvania basketball teams rate post-season tournament consideration today with one-third of the 1948-49 court campaign tucked away in mothballs.

Villanova, Duquesne, La Salle, Gettysburg, Washington and Jefferson and Pittsburgh each has won the form necessary to land a post-season berth.

The Wildcats of Villanova ran their undefeated string to 11 straight nights to rank as one of the six unbeaten basketball teams in the country.

Villanova appeared to be coasting to victory when Manhattan suddenly caught fire and crept to within one point at the final gun. Villanova won, 40-39, with Paul Arizin, the brilliant center, contributing 20 points.

Duquesne, La Salle and Pitt were idle but W. & J. and Gettysburg came through with victories. The Presidents (7-1) out-scored Muskingum, 76-58, while Gettysburg (6-2) beat out Lafayette in overtime, 60-58.

It was the sixth straight victory from Gettysburg, which dropped its first two games in close decisions to Cornell and Princeton.

Temple (8-4) lost face by bowing to Syracuse, 59-44, while Waynesburg (7-3) slid down the ladder by taking an 82-50 shellacking from West Virginia.

Albright surprised St. Joseph's 65-47 at Reading while Scranton was scoring a 68-67 triumph over Moravian by a last-minute rally.

St. Francis (6-4) was the busiest team in the state over the weekend, beating Lemoyne 86-80 in overtime at a Saturday double-header at Altoona and coming back to beat Steubenville 103-49 Sunday at Lor-et. It was the first time a state five passed the century mark this season.

Troop A Gains 2nd Straight Loop Win

Led by Kane who tallied 25 points. Troop A of the local National Guard outfit, won its second straight league game Sunday by defeating Headquarters 104th Cavalry 51-30 at Harrisburg.

The local cagers took a 15-6 lead in the first period and steadily increased their lead the remainder of the game.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP)—The Universities of Notre Dame and North Carolina will lay a football game in Yankee Stadium next fall for the benefit, they say, of the Irish alumni in New York and New England.

Another football oddity is that Coach Bud Wilkinson, who made it possible for Oklahoma to pick up a $103,000 Sugar Bowl tab, had to take on two extra jobs to get a salary that would justify his staying there. We doubt that even as fine a coach as Bud can really handle three jobs.

Biggest post-season grid laugh comes from the solemn statements that the latest change in substitution rule will eliminate bench quarterbacking.

After Clemson's footballers had won ten straight games last fall and started receiving bowl "feelers," tub-thumper Ed Osborne telephoned his predecessor, Joe Sherman.

Today's Talk

WHY WAR?

Benjamin Franklin once said that "there never was a good war or a bad peace." Even a bad peace, if it lasts, is better than no peace at all. And usually most peacees are imperfect. The costs of all wars, in life and treasure, are beyond the imagination in their effect upon peoples and the world.

But why do we continue them? We have the story of the dark ages, of the inquisitions, of the so-called New England witchcraft, and other such evil forces, but none can compare in brutality to our so-called "civilized" wars. Writing to his son, about fifty years ago, George Gissing, the English writer, wrote: "War is a thing to be ashamed of, and not to glory in. It is wicked and dreadful for the people of one country to go and kill those of another. Never suppose that victories in war are things to be proud of. Some day people will be astonished that such things could be done."

We know more about the terror and destruction of war now than at any other time in human history. An English soldier was found dead with papers upon him—little notes that he had written to his young son about life and war, and he said that war was "simply filth." But it is so much more than that. It is, as General Sherman said—"hell." Why, then, do we keep it in this world? Why can't we work as hard for peace as we do for war, or when in a war, for victory?

We know all too well about what war does to the world, but how little we know about what universal peace could do. How the world could be transformed into a wonderful place in which to live if all worked solely and unselfishly for peace and good will toward all men! That was the program of Christ in all his teachings. Has Christianity failed? Or is it only that people have failed?

The free nations of this world will never have the glorious chance that they now have to put an end to this fiendish business of war. Peace is gentle. Its symbol is the dove. But name calling among nations, with their leaders strutting around with their pockets full of guns and swords rattling at their sides, can never bring universal peace and good will to the peoples of this world. Then why war?

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "On Being Corrected."

Just Folks

DUST GATHERERS
I have kept them so long that the women folks say
In the attic they now should be hidden away,
For the women who daily pick up after me
Won't let me leave things where I want them to be.

"It is long after Christmas!" the women declare,
"And you still have that basket of cards by your chair.
They just double the dusting each morning we do.
It is hard to keep house for a fellow like you."

"Let them stay where they are!" to the women I say.
"When it suits me I'll tell you to put them away.
These are greetings from friends and they're precious to me,
But the dust that they gather is all you can see."

The Spanish Republic is likely to fare badly between the Carlists and the new executive, Marshal Serano. On Friday the latter dissolved the Cortes, announcing his purpose to order a new election, when order is restored. That means that Serano proposes to play the role of Dictator. Meanwhile the Carlists are showing new signs of life. Don Carlos has put himself at the head of his forces, said to be 25,000 strong, and is threatening Bilbao.

HOW TO IDENTIFY EVERGREENS

To be able to distinguish among the various genera and species and varieties of evergreens is not nearly as difficult a task as might be imagined by a person who has never studied the subject. Each genus has a least one identifying mark; none is identical with another in leaf formation. Here are a few helpful suggestions offered as a basis by which interested readers may continue to study these various plants until they are proficient in distinguishing all of them on sight:

Pinus—The pines are characteristically marked by their needles, needles always tied in bundles of two to five or more. Length of these needles depends on the particular variety and also on the vigor of the individual tree or shrub. But the bundles of needles, tied together at their base, is the badge that identifies all the pines.

SPRUCES—Here the needles are single, scattered all over the woody stem, with roughened scars farther back where former needles have dropped away. Few spruce needles are more than an inch in length, being somewhat square or flattened, as tested by rolling them between the thumb and forefinger. They are sharp on the ends and stand out like quills. If a spruce needle is cut crosswise, a 4-sided structure is observed.

FIR—The leaves of this entire group are flat in form, measuring 1 to 2 inches in length. Most varieties have a shiny top surface to their leaves and a silvery shade on the under side. They are fastened in rows on the twig, being attached entirely around it. Circular scars are left where the old leaves drop from the twigs. White gum seals the bud ends of most firs. Too, the tree is pyramidal generally in form and its cones are borne erect. The cones of both pines and spruces hang down. This last habit is particularly significant with the firs.

HEMLOCKS—Leaves are flat, with a shiny top surface and two whitish lines lengthwise on the under side. They are scattered on the twig. The whitish lines are the best means of identification, although the daintiness of the foliage is noticeable.

YEW—Occasionally the yews are confused with the spruces, but this can be immediately overcome by remembering that spruces bear cones, yews produce berries. Too, the yew is seldom more than a small, low-growing shrub. The leaves are dark green on the top surface and show two yellowish lines on their under side. The leaves are rarely longer than a half inch and are arranged alternately to form a flat spray.

JUNIPERS—The common red cedars.

GARDEN TASKS FOR JANUARY

Weak and straggling growth on house plants should be pinched back.

As the sun gets warmer, move your plants back out of very sunny windows or pull your blinds down during part of the afternoon.

For healthy house plants keep the humidity indoors as high as possible by placing pans of water on or near your radiators.

When poinsettia leaves turn yellow it is time to withhold water.

The water used on African violets should always be of room temperature.

DAISY—A juniper. To those who are familiar with this tree the entire genus may be more easily recognized. Junipers vary greatly in size, shape and color. But they fall into a separate class from most other evergreens by their habit of bearing berries and not cones. One type of leaf is sharp and awl-shaped; the other overlaps with a scale-like effect. The white cedar belongs to the Cypress genus. The Deodar of the Pacific coast is one of the few true cedars found in North America.

ARBORVITAE—The leaves of this shrub appear as though they had been pressed in a book. The American type bears drooping or horizontal fronds; Oriental sorts bear erect or upright sprays. If the leaves of an Arborvitae are crushed the aroma will be more fragrant than that of any other evergreen.

RETINOSPORA—Closely related to the Arborvitae and Cypress, this group of shrubs greatly resemble in foliage the former. However their sprays are more feathery and frond-like than those of the Arborvitae.

ture or warmer.

Look over your stored vegetables to see which should be used first. Inspect your stored bulbs, particularly dahlias and gladioli, which can develop diseases now. Cut away any bad tissue and dust surfaces with sulphur.

Prune fruit trees and grapevines during any mild midwinter spell.

After a snowfall, trample down the snow around your tree trunks to discourage rodents that may be feeding on the bark under the snow.

Watch out for loose branches on shrubs, especially roses, whipping in the wind.

While outdoor gardening activities are at a standstill, take advantage of this time to repair garden tools and other garden accessories.

Clean and repair seed flats and pans in preparation for starting seeds indoors.

Send for the new seed and nursery catalogues and start planning your new garden now.

ASKS INCREASE OF 400 IN SIZE OF POLICE FORCE

Harrisburg, Jan. 17 (AP)—A proposal to add 400 more members to the Pennsylvania state police will go before the 1949 legislature with the backing of Gov. James H. Duff.

The additional manpower would boost the state police force to about 2,000 men at an estimated extra cost of $4,000,000 the next two years. The Governor said the increase is necessary "in the interests of safety on Pennsylvania highways." At the same time, Duff used the additional cost as a further argument in favor of his proposed increase in the state's gasoline tax.

500 Men For 41,000 Miles

The Governor has recommended a boost of either one or two cents a gallon in the four-cent gas levy depending on whether a state building authority is authorized to pay for the state's $100,000,000 a year road construction program.

Duff said the request for more state policemen, made by Col. C. M. Wilhelm, state police commissioner, will be sent to the legislature for action.

The Governor said that at present only about 70 per cent of the state police force is available for traffic duty on shifts.

"That means that any one time of day, somewhat less than 500 men are assigned to patrolling some 41,000 miles of highways, an impossible task where highway safety is concerned," Duff said in a statement.

Duff noted that $10,000,000 of the $15,000,000 spent for state police operations in the current two years came from the state motor fund, and added: "It would further seem that the cost of this additional manpower should come from an increase in gasoline taxes."

Littlestown

Littlestown—Flowers were placed in the chancel of Christ Reformed church on Sunday morning by the Girls' Guild of the church. This was their "golden deed" for the month. ## House Fly Can't Be Exterminated By DDT

Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 17 (AP)—A Shenandoah (Pa.) engineer reports that the house fly can no longer be exterminated by DDT.

So the world health organization has gone to work experimenting with new insecticides.

Dr. Paul W. Bierstein, public health engineer, said that while DDT campaigns have all but eliminated soft-shelled flies, the others have reproduced in enormous numbers. He said his organization is now working with three new types of insecticides: DDD (dichloro-diphenyl-dichloroethane) which contains the same chemicals as DDT, clordane and benzene hexachloride.

Meanwhile, Dr. Paul Mueller, who won the Nobel prize for discovering the insect-killing aspects of DDT, said his firm is trying to find a formula to kill the hard-shelled flies as well as the soft-shelled variety.

'Captain Harry' Was Good Eater, Says Cook

Meadville, Pa., Jan. 17 (AP)—President Truman as a World War I artillery officer "ate everything we put in front of him," says the man who did most of his cooking.

"Captain Harry wasn't a bit 'finicky' about his food in his soldier days. Charles Blankenmeier said last night as he prepared to attend President Truman's inaugural Thursday.

"I should know," Blankenmeier said, "because I prepared his food for a long time, along with the food for a couple of hundred other men."

FIVE INSECTS ATTACK PLANTS GROWN INDOORS

House plants have their enemies but on the whole the enemies are not as serious a problem as on outdoor plants, says Alfred Putz in the New York Herald Tribune. Nevertheless, they must be destroyed promptly to avert considerable damage or complete disaster to the affected plants. Vigilance and prompt action are necessary.

Fortunately, house plants are under closer scrutiny than garden plants, and, since they are close to eye level, invaders are more easily detected, even if they are rather small or inconspicuous. The adverse effect on plant growth caused by these pests—so minute as to be barely visible except with a good magnifying glass—is also more easily noticed because of the gardener's close daily contact with the plants.

Just because things have been running smoothly for some time is no reason to assume that the plants are safe. One never can tell when a pest will show up. Special vigilance must be exercised every time a new specimen is added to the collection. It is good practice to subject all newcomers to a rigid inspection and a thorough bath. Keeping them in quarantine for a week or two may be difficult for most home gardeners but it is worth the effort and inconvenience.

Mealybugs Like Violets
There are five major house-plant enemies belonging to the insect kingdom. They are mealybugs, plant lice (aphids), white flies, spider mites and scale pests. These are encountered most frequently, but the gardener should also be able to identify lace bugs and mites.

Mealybugs are especially fond of African violets, fuchsia and gardenia. The fluffy white masses observed are not the insects themselves but a waxy substance exuded by them for protection from the egg-stage on. A small cotton swab fastened to a toothpick and dipped in alcohol is touched to the whites masses to kill the pest. Look especially in protected places, such as the spot where the leaf petioles join the stems. Segregate affected plants and keep them under close scrutiny for a week or two after treatment to make sure none was missed.

Plant lice or aphids often are the same color as the young shoots they feed on. They propagate at an unbelievable rate, so no time must be lost after they are first noticed. They are soft-bodied insects and succumb readily to a good contact insecticide such as nicotine sulphate. The plants may either be sprayed thoroughly to hit every insect or the tops may be dipped briefly into the solution.

Spider Mites Tiny
Spider mites are so tiny as to be on the borderline of visibility for most eyes, but a good magnifying glass will bring them out as active, eight-legged creatures that depend on a fine, silky, irregularly spun web for quick travel on the underside of the leaves. This web also serves as protection. They usually are called red spiders, but actually they are mites and few of them are red.

They thrive in hot, dry air, so that lowering the temperature and increasing the humidity helps to prevent serious outbreaks. Coarse-leaved plants may be freed of them by a bath in soapy water and with the help of a soft sponge run over all surfaces. Nicotine sulphate and several proprietary sprays are available. Fine sulphur dust has also been found effective and is best for soft or hairy leaves.

White flies are small, white, moth-like insects. They are most difficult to control in the home, and commercial growers resort to fumigation of the houses. Nicotine sulphate spray, directed especially against the underside of the leaves, will kill those that are hit; but their habit of taking to their wings at the slightest disturbance is rather frustrating. However, persistent spraying twice a week will eventually clean them up.

Scale Pests
Scale pests affect primarily ferns, cactus, palms and occasionally rubber plants. Immobile mature scales are best removed carefully with the finger nails but the young crawling ones will succumb to any good contact spray or even a forceful fine spray of water which will knock them off.

Lace bugs seldom attack any other house plants but azaleas. They are almost transparent, flat-

OPPOSE GAS TAX INCREASE

Harrisburg, Jan. 17 (AP)—The Pennsylvania oil industry Saturday came out against a proposed increase in the state's gasoline tax on the grounds it isn't needed.

W. S. Zehrung, chairman of the Associated Petroleum Industries of Pennsylvania, said "a close scrutiny of actual receipts and expenditures of the motor license fund in 1948 reveals an increase of about nine per cent in motor license fees and about 10 per cent in the four-cent gasoline tax revenues over 1947."

"If we can conservatively anticipate even a portion of this percentage increase in 1949 and 1950, sufficient funds will be available for a fully adequate road building program without an increase in the gasoline tax rate."

The stand was in direct opposition to that of Gov. James H. Duff who urged a boost in gasoline taxes if the $100,000,000 a year highway building program is to continue at its present scale.

Duff urged either a one or two cents a gallon boost dependent on whether a state building authority is set up to take over financing of the biggest highway construction jobs. He estimated a two-cent boost would bring in $37,500,000 more a year.

Many rural GOP members privately have said they will not vote any gas tax boost without specific assurances of more road building in their home communities.

tend insects, pressing close to the underside of the leaves so that they are difficult to see unless they move. Nicotine sulphate will take care of them.

Mites which burrow into the leaf tissues are more difficult to control than any of those mentioned. They deform and stunt the plants, especially the young shoots. Light infestations on African violets and begonias will yield to a dusting of fine sulphur. Those affecting crassula, cyclamen and geranium (pelargonium) will also succumb to a thorough drenching or a fifteen-minute dip in a nicotine-soap solution. Affected plants never should be allowed to touch others; if handled, washing the hands with good strong soap is advised to make sure none are transported by this means.

The use of barley-corns (grains of barley) in measurement still survives in shoe numbers, which run by thirds of an inch or "barley-corns."

Chemical Foods Are Handy Indoors

Liquid manure is a safe and valuable fertilizer for house plants in active growth but it is messy to make and the order is objectionable. Chemical plant foods, on the other hand, are practically odorless. They may not work quite so quickly but have the advantage of being better balanced, especially if they contain all the minor elements. Some come in granulated form, others are powdered and still others are pressed into tablets which eliminate the need for measuring.

There also are various concentrated liquid brands which require dilution with water before use. To prevent damage to the plants they must be used in accordance with the manufacturers' directions. They often work wonders on plants in active growth but it must be clearly understood that resting plants must never be fed.

AMBULANCE IN CRASH

Ardmore, Pa., Jan. 17 (AP)—The Waynesboro (Pa.) community ambulance, en route to Philadelphia to return a patient to that Franklin county town, collided with an automobile at an intersection here, police reported. The driver of the car, Coleman Sellers 3rd, of Ardmore, suffered a laceration of the forehead and knee abrasions. His son, William Sellers, 27, and the driver of the ambulance, Nevin Thompson, 55, were uninjured.

Chapter 7
"Fishing?" Gertrude waited. "Oh, Dad, how can you be so—so provincial?"

"You've been fishing, Father. I'm sure you went a couple of times last summer. Besides, I didn't know you cared particularly for outdoor sports."

"Never had a chance to," her father answered, without smiling. "Spent half my life right here, too, within sight of the finest fishpond in the world. Sure, I went fishing last year. Twice. Stayed three times one time and two hours the other. And that's partial to partial time too."

"Perhaps if you'd think of your family once in a while—" Minniebelle, unable to resist the opening, repeated her theme song in an agitated voice.

Betty, realizing that the conversation was getting out of hand, tried to pull back into safer channels. The weather, she decided, was a safe topic. In fact, it seemed to be the only topic open to discussion in Carrollton.

"It's funny," she said, groping for innocuous words, "how people can always find reasons outside of themselves for whatever they don't like. They go around with chips on their shoulders, blaming everybody else for everything—including the rain—just because they can't take it."

Uncle Dave was laughing again. "Maybe you've got something there, girlie," he was saying. "So we don't live right. So the Lord sends us rain, rain, and more rain. That I'll have to tell to the fellows. Maybe it'll start a back-to-church movement. By golly, we could stand a little church-going around here. Churches are starving to death."

"David!" Minniebelle reproved him. "That's nothing to joke about. People should go to church—rain or no rain. And if members would only—"

"I'm not joking. Sure they should go to church. Didn't I just say so? Don't I go to church? Come to think of it, I haven't missed many Sundays since Gertrude here was born."

"What I was trying to say when you interrupted me," his wife went on, "was that if other members were as conscientious about paying their dues as we are, the churches wouldn't starve. We women are having a bazaar next week and a rummage sale the week after. That should make up at least part of the deficit, although it does mean a lot of hard work for the ladies."

"Oh, you women and your rummage sales!" David exploded. "Minniebelle, I swear to God, if you take my old blue dungarees out and sell them, I'll never set foot inside a church again. I don't care what they look like. I aim to wear them—if I ever get to go fishing again."

The tears welled up in Minniebelle's eyes. "You don't have to shout at me," she said.

Betty, unaccustomed to the vagaries of family life, could only sit there, her face crimson with embarrassment. She was glad to see Uncle Dave show some spirit, but she wished he hadn't carried it so far. She was vastly relieved to hear her uncle say in a placating tone:

"Sorry, Minniebelle, honey. I shouldn't have run off at the mouth like that—only for Pete's sake don't sell my dungarees! Sorry, girls. Didn't mean to be so cantankerous."

He waited until everyone had nodded acknowledgment of his apology. Then, assuming that he was forgiven, he said:

"Okay. Tomorrow's Sunday. What do you say we start the ball rolling—never mind the rain. What do you say we all pile in the car and surprise old Brother Miller? He's probably figuring on speaking to an empty church. Funny about rain—how it fills up the movie houses and empties all the churches."

"I am going to church tomorrow," Gertrude announced unexpectedly. "I am going every Sunday hereafter. I feel just as you do, Father. If people can go to movies and things like that in the rain, why can't they go to church too?"

"Good girl, Gertrude," her father applauded. "What do you think of that, Minniebelle?" His smile of approval included both mother and daughter.

Minniebelle sat with her mouth open, unable to utter a word, unable to believe her ears. Gertrude was not only announcing her intention of going to church every Sunday; she was censuring people who didn't!

"All the girls are going to the Congregational church tomorrow. We intend to make quite a party of it. Reverend Shaw—he's the new minister, you know—is expecting us. It's his first Sunday here; his first church too. I figured the less we could do was to give him a good crowd and a real welcome. Oh, Father, I've been standing at the telephone all morning, calling the girls and making plans. I'll just die if Mother interferes. I don't think she even cares whether I go to church or not."

"Shaw—Reverend Shaw," Gertrude's father repeated thoughtfully. "Oh, yes. He's that young shaver that popped into town a couple of days ago, looking like he was on his way to a funeral. Somebody said he was the new Congregational minister, but I didn't believe it. I couldn't see a young pup like that standing up in the pulpit and telling folks how they should live. Fiddlesticks! He's not dry behind the ears yet; can't be a day over twenty."

"Father! That's downright sacrilegious! Besides, he's twenty-five years old. He's a Harvard graduate too. And even if he is a preacher, he's positively the most intelligent man that ever came to Carrollton."

She flashed a defiant glance at her mother, as if half expecting a denial. Then continued. "Ellen Raymond," she said, naming the mayor's daughter, "told me everything. He had dinner there last night. She says he's marvelous—and so handsome!"

"I don't care if it's raining cats and dogs tomorrow morning," Gertrude was saying. "I'm taking the new car. And I'm going to the Congregational church. That's definite, Father!"

Chapter 8

"All right, all right, Gertrude," her father smiled indulgently. "You don't have to get so excited about it. Nobody's stopping you. You're taking the new car. And you're going to the Congregational church to see the pretty new minister. Okay, okay. Far as I can see, one church is as good as another. As long as you go—that's the important thing. Eh, Minniebelle?"

Minniebelle's face crumpled and the tears, which she had been holding in check for some time, began to roll down her cheeks. Pressing her napkin to her face, she pushed her chair back, got up and left the room, her whole body shaking with sobs.

David stared after her in undisguised surprise. "Holy Moses, what's come over her? I've never known her to cry before. Didn't know she could cry."

"What did happen, Betty? Gertrude and her mom have a falling-out or something?"

Betty hesitated. "No—er—yes. Well they did have a few words. But you heard Gertrude admit she was sorry. And I'm sure Aunt Minniebelle is really quite sick. She should be in bed, but she just won't give up. Her cold's been getting worse all day, and—"

"Sick?" David pushed back his plate, his face registering both apology and concern. "I didn't know Minniebelle was sick."

"I'll go upstairs," Betty said. "Maybe she'll let me do something for her—now. I've been trying all afternoon, but she wouldn't let me. She pushed back her plate and got up from the table. 'I'll get her to bed if I can; then I'll come down and clear up the dishes.'"

When Betty came downstairs half an hour later, Gertrude and David were waiting in the living room.

"Everything under control?" asked David. Evidently his anxiety over his wife had been superseded by anxiety over his daughter. "Good girl, Betty. Pretty soft having a nurse in the house."

Betty tried to smile at his false gaiety. "But I'm not really a nurse," she reminded him. "I was only in training a little while." Her face sobered. "And everything's not under control. I'm afraid Aunt Minniebelle's very sick. I don't want to scare you and Gertrude. I did everything I could to make her comfortable, but—well, her fever is a hundred and four, and I—I'm scared. I'm afraid it's pneumonia."

Things happened fast after that. Betty had scarcely finished speaking before David was at the telephone calling Doctor Hammett. But Hammett, an elderly man, was confined to his bed with grippe and could not come. Mrs. Hammett, who answered the phone, suggested a doctor in North Carrollton. Here again David met with no success. Doctor Murphy, it seemed, was out on a labor case and would not be back before morning.

"Well," said David. "I suppose there's nothing to do but call that new doctor—what's his name, Gertrude?"

"Doctor Newton," Gertrude answered promptly. "Doctor George Newton."

David, muttering something about young upstarts who wouldn't know a case of pneumonia if it ran into them and smacked them down, made the call.

"Newton will be right over," he told the girls as he came away from the phone. "It's probably the first call he's had. And I don't mind saying I'd sooner have a veterinarian, if I knew where to get a good one."

"But what's wrong with Doctor Newton?" Betty wanted to know.

"If he's not an accredited doctor, he shouldn't be practicing medicine."

"Well"—David hesitated—"he's an accredited doctor all right. Don't know as I can say what's wrong with him—yet. He's a newcomer; folks aren't trusting him to the extent of putting their lives in his hands. Matter of fact, he's got to prove himself before he gets any practice around here."

Betty's first glimpse of Doctor George Newton was across Gertrude's blonde curls as the girl ran to him and, between sobs, demanded that he "do something for Mother." Gertrude had rushed to the door and opened it the moment she heard the car enter the driveway.

Somehow his general appearance convinced Betty that Aunt Minniebelle would be in good hands. She smiled a vote of confidence in his direction, but he did not see her. He was looking through and beyond her at David Warren who stood at the foot of the stairs, waiting.

David spoke to the doctor briefly, then led the way upstairs, the very line of his back expressing disapproval.

Betty could not help wondering how Doctor Newton could manage to minister to Aunt Minniebelle—what with Gertrude's incessant "dosomethings" and Uncle Dave's disapproving eyes upon him. The young man, however, solved that problem immediately. Signaling to Betty to stay, he motioned the others to leave the room, which they did.

"I don't know that you'll be much help either," he said. "You probably wouldn't know a stethoscope from a gyroscope, but I'll be needing spoons and water and stuff. At least you don't look mad as a hornet and you don't make a noise."

Betty had been just about to tell him of her brief hospital experience and suggest that she might be really useful. But she decided against that now. He had no right to make such an impertinent remark just because Uncle Dave and the townspeople did not trust him. Why, she was his one friend at court! At least she had tried to be.

Chapter 9

Summer had come to New England. It was as though some giant hand had turned the pages of a fabulous book, skipping several chapters. Just as David Warren had predicted, there had been no spring season. One day it was winter; the next day, miraculously, summer had come. And what a summer!

This morning, as she stood at a window in her bedroom looking out at the panoramic spread before her, Betty was sure she had never seen anything quite so beautiful. It was, she decided, a technicolor picture come to life. It seemed incredible that she had ever disliked New England.

"I must have been mad," she murmured, "completely mad. It's Heaven—pure and unadulterated Heaven!"

It wasn't precisely Heaven, although the immediate surroundings were as near to perfection as Aunt Minniebelle and her City Improvement club had been able to make them, in view of limited funds and a slight difference of opinion as to what constituted perfection.

Nor had Minniebelle's illness proven too great an obstacle. The ladies had rallied nobly to her assistance. Therefore she had been able to direct activities—first, from her sickbed, and then from a chair placed in front of the living room window overlooking the Green.

In fact, Minniebelle sick had been able to do more than Minniebelle well. Her untimely attack of pneumonia, her Spartan courage in carrying on in the face of death itself, had spurred her cohorts on to greater efforts. The results were highly satisfactory—even to Minniebelle.

Moreover, Carrollton, unlike most of the nearby villages, did not indulge in summer supersalesmanship. Except for the souvenir stores along Main street and a few women who sold hooked rugs in the poorer section, Carrollton was not catering to a transient trade.

Tourists, Carrollton argued, would come automatically—for patriotic reasons. If they wanted to buy anything, they could patronize the church rummage sales, which was only right and proper. If they mistook Mrs. Hague's old bureau for a genuine antique—well, it wasn't the Ladies' Aid's fault.

The Warren house, which Betty had come to think of as home, was one of a group of two-story white houses facing the famous "Green," where the statue of William Bradford stood guard.

Betty could see the simple stone structure which sheltered the Rock where the forefathers landed. All through the summer people would come from far and near, to stand with bared heads before this historic shrine. And to make caustic remarks about the improbability of a hundred and two pilgrims being able to land on such a small rock.

Carrollton, she felt, had every reason to be proud of the Rock, which was part of its heritage. She was proud of it too. Although she had seen very little of the town, and the surrounding countryside, she was sure she loved every inch of it. Certainly the view from her window was perfect. Even the perennials that flanked the William Bradford statue on the Green did not disturb her too much, though she did feel that Mr. Bradford looked a little silly standing knee-deep in a flower bed.

However, she could understand the reason for the flower bed, just as she had come to understand so many things that had puzzled her at first. Mr. Bradford did look sort of grim and uncompromising—like winter, for instance. It was right that Aunt Minniebelle and her ladies should plant flowers around him. Otherwise he wouldn't fit in at all with the incredible beauty which was New England in the summer.

She understood the Warrens too, and was less critical of them. Their small squabbles had ceased to disturb her. She knew now that they didn't mean anything. The Warrens had their ups and downs, just as all families did. But back of every minor spat there was a strong bond of love and loyalty that never failed to assert itself. Certainly they had more than enough virtues to compensate for the faults that made them human.

Besides, they were her family. If

CAPITAL CITY IS ABOUT READY FOR INAUGURAL

By D. HAROLD OLIVER

Washington, Jan. 17 (P)—This 150-year-old federal city just about finished dressing up today for the nation's 41st Inaugural ceremony—one that may go down in history as the most festive of all.

Out-of-town visitors who began streaming in for an entire week of celebrating saw a mass of white enveloping the stand and seats built in front of the great-domed capitol where Harry S. Truman and Alben W. Barkley will take the oath as President and Vice President Thursday at noon (EST).

They saw the circus seats of more somber hue stretched out along well-trodden Pennsylvania avenue awaiting some of the 750,000 or 1,000,000 persons expected to see all or part of the formal launching of the Truman "Fair Deal."

Two And A Half Hour Parade
Lamp posts clutch American flags and blue-gold Presidential seals on shields of wood. Another great white pine-boarded stand has been constructed in front of the White House where the President will she had been over-critical at first, it was only because she knew so little about the strange inconsistencies that go to make up normal family life. Aunt Minniebelle's querulousness, Gertrude's young insolence, Uncle Dave's unfortunate habit of sticking his neck out—all were just part of the pattern which Betty had come to accept. She only wished they understood one another as well as she understood them. That she was being a little presumptuous at this point didn't occur to her.

In a way, Mrs. Warren's illness had proved to be a blessing in disguise. Gertrude, frightened into a temporary docility, had presented no problem at all. Now that her mother was safely convalescing, she was away from home most of the time. Her long, shiny new car and her bright blonde curls were a familiar sight on the various highways. Every morning she would jump up from the breakfast table and sing out:

"Well, good-bye now. I've got to get a move on. The gang's waiting, and I mean waiting!"

tie's banquet hall. This program is in charge of the Community service committee which consists of Cloy Crouse, chairman, Edward T. Richardson, Dr. Joseph R. Riden, Howard G. Blocher, Paul E. King and Dr. Donald B. Coover.

Flowers were placed in the sanctuary of Redeemer's Reformed church on Sunday morning in memory of Rudolph M. Garland. Sunday afternoon, in the church, the pastor, Rev. Frank E. Reynolds baptized Jane Peggy Crouse, infant daughter of Robert L. Crouse, Jr., and Peggy Deardorff Crouse. She was born at Gettysburg, November 17, 1948.

The pastor announced that the Hustlers class will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the Misses Malva and Louise Duttera, South Queen street, instead of the church as previously announced.

Special prayers for church unity will be said following the daily masses at 7:15 a. m., this week in St. Aloysius Catholic church.

Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe W. Rittase, Prince street extended, included Mr. Rittase's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Rittase, Baltimore; also Mrs. Pearl Munzert and Edward Kalb, Baltimore and Miss Lois Shull, town. Mrs. A. N. Mellott returned to her home in Cambridge after spending

TRAIN ASSAULT CASE IS PROBED

Los Angeles, Jan. 17 (P)—The case of reported assault in lower berth five of the Southern Pacific's West Coast Limited was left in the hands of railroad and Oregon investigators today.

Two sailors questioned for seven and a half hours in Los Angeles following a 1,000-mile, two-state, inquiry on the train were released to proceed to their station in San Diego. Authorities said no one else was in custody.

Mrs. Opal Holmes, 35-year-old mother of two sons, who reported the assault to the train crew, then to District Attorney Dayton Van Vactor of Klamath Falls, Ore., was in seclusion with relatives in the Los Angeles area. They told reporters she would make no statement, on advice of an attorney she is retaining.

Van Vactor said he had nothing so far to justify arrests and would issue no warrants. He planned to turn over all evidence compiled to the prosecutor of Lane county, Ore., where the alleged assault occurred.

The case recalled the "murder in lower 13" aboard the same train in the same locality on January 23, 1943. In each instance a woman's scream from a pullman berth in the early morning hours startled passengers and brought authorities running.

But six years years ago, Mrs. Martha Virginia Brinson James, 21, pretty wife of a navy petty officer, was found with her throat cut. She died without identifying her attacker. Subsequently a Negro assistant cook on the train, Robert E. Lee Folkes, 23, was convicted and executed in Oregon's gas chamber.

the electoral college and state governors, and a Hollywood-flavored pre-Inaugural gala at the National Guard armory featuring stars of the radio, stage and screen, the armed services and national symphony orchestras, and a chorus of 185 voices.

Thursday, the big day, will be marked by the solemn oath-taking and the President's speech, the Inaugural parade, a Presidential reception, and the Grand Inaugural ball at the armory.

The whole will be a far cry from that first Inaugural in this capital city shortly after its birth, when Thomas Jefferson, accompanied by a few friends, walked from his boarding house near the capitol to the Senate chamber to take the oath of office on March 4, 1801.

CABBIES RETURN

Pittsburgh, Jan. 17 (P)—Pittsburgh's 450 Yellow Cab drivers were back on the job today after a 24-hour work stoppage. Spokesmen for the company and the AFL Taxicab Drivers Union said yesterday the stoppage resulted from the suspension of a driver whose cab was stolen after he left it with the ignition key still in place. The cab was recovered later. The union ordered the drivers back to work after a conference yesterday and the company promised a hearing for the suspended driver.

Large Audience At Service

The first service in the second series of the 1948-1949 community vesper services, sponsored by the Littlestown Ministerium was held Sunday evening in St. John's Lutheran church. The service was very largely attended. Guest minister for the service was the Rev. Charles A. Price, pastor of St. Mary's Reformed church, Silver Run, Md., and also the pastor of "The Country Church of the Air" over Station WHVR every Sunday morning from 8 to 8:30 a. m. His theme was "The Eternal Paradox of the Gospel" which was a discussion of the "Mercy versus the Judgment of God" and was based on the parable of the Dragnet in St. Matthew 13:47-48.

The speaker said: "God's mercy is strong because of His justice. If we spend our lives in greed, all we will have is war. God's mercy includes all men and conditions, yet only the good are kept and the bad are cast away."

The host pastor, the Rev. Kenneth D. James, presided over the service. The responsive reading for the evening was Psalm 66 and the pastor read St. John 2:1-12 as the scripture lesson.

The speaker was secured by the Rev. David S. Kammerer, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran, who was unable to be present because he was in Boiling Springs, where on Sunday morning, he installed his son, the Rev. John Kammerer as the pastor of the Boiling Springs Lutheran church. In the absence of the Rev.

Mr. Kammerer, the Rev. Grantas E. Hoopert, president of the Ministerium, introduced the speaker. The evening prayer was also offered by the Rev. Mr. Hoopert.

Mrs. Luther Myers, church organist and the St. John's choir led the congregational singing. A vocal number, "Somebody Is Praying for You," was sung by a trio consisting of the Misses Jean, Eloise and Betty Yealy, accompanied on the organ by their sister, Mrs. Luther Myers. The service next Sunday evening will be held in the Centenary Methodist church. The Rev. Kenneth D. James has secured the Rev. H. W. Sternat, pastor of the Lutheran church at Biglerville as guest preacher for the service.

Teachers Renew Pay Demands At Capital

Harrisburg, Jan. 17 (AP)—Organized school teachers of Pennsylvania renewed their demand today for higher salaries and a broadened pension system.

The executive council of the Pennsylvania State Education Association called upon the legislature to carry out a constitutional requirement of "providing a thorough and efficient system of education for every boy and girl in the Commonwealth beyond the age of six years."

President David H. Stewart, of Dormont, urged an upward revision in salaries to attract teachers to the profession. He said there is a need for 8,700 new teachers in Pennsylvania.

The public school retirement system, Stewart said, has not been changed materially since it was established in 1919. He said that many teachers are retiring on sums less than that provided by the state for citizens on the public assistance rolls.

TO ASK INCREASE IN TAX ON PAY

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP)—The administration was reported reliably today as about ready to ask Congress for almost $8,000,000,000 in payroll taxes next year to finance a vastly expanded Social Security program that would include government payment of doctor bills.

This would be more than double the $3,250,000,000 now collected annually for the present limited coverage and survivors insurance and for unemployment compensation.

Now President Truman is proposing health and disability insurance, and expansion and liberalization of present old age benefits and unemployment compensations.

The administration is expected to ask for a six per cent social security tax—probably three per cent to be collected from that part of an employed person's pay up to $4,800 (this would make the maximum pay envelope tax $144 against a present top of $30), and probably a similar 3 per cent from his employer.

Later, when the health insurance program gets in full swing the tax will become higher—a determination has not been made, but maybe around 4 per cent each against employee and employer.

(Social security taxes now are 1 per cent on that part of an employed person's income up to $3,000, or a top of $30 a year. The employer matches each worker's tax. In addition the employer pays an unemployment compensation tax that averages out at about 1½ per cent. The employee does not now pay anything into the unemployment fund. The security taxes are entirely separate from individual and corporate income taxes.)

The "pennyweight" originally was the weight of the English penny.

CLARK ASKING REVISIONS OF ESPIONAGE ACT

By JACK ADAMS

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP)—A sweeping revision of the Espionage laws has been proposed by Attorney General Clark as protection against "the treacherous operations of those who would weaken our nation internally."

He asked Congress for unprecedented peacetime power to press spy charges no matter how long ago the offense occurred, and said law officers should have the legal right to tap wires for evidence in such cases.

The bill Clark sent Friday to House Speaker Rayburn (D-Tex.) and Chairman McCarran (D-Nev.) of the Senate Judiciary committee embodied the unanimous recommendations of an interdepartmental committee made up of FBI, Army and Navy intelligence experts.

Follows Long Probe
Their submission to Congress follows an 18-month investigation by a special federal grand jury in New York city into alleged foreign spying in this country, and a lengthy and sensational inquiry into the same subject by the House un-American Activities committee.

Besides the request for power to get evidence by tapping wires and by-pass the statute of limitations in spy cases, he asked changes in the Espionage laws to:

1. Make the unauthorized possession of restricted government documents a felony.
2. Require the surrender of such documents to proper authorities without demand.

Other Provisions
3. Make illegal the unauthorized handling of national defense information which could be used "to the advantage of any foreign nation"—instead of requiring intent to injure the United States, as at present.

4. Punish failure to report the loss, theft, "abstraction, destruction or unlawful transmission" of restricted information.

5. Punish conspiracies involved in the gathering, transmission or loss of defense information.

6. Require the registration as foreign agents of all persons in this country who ever received instructions or training in espionage and sabotage under a foreign government "or foreign political party."

Would Use War Laws
7. Make the failure to so register a continuing offense—to remove any possibility an offender could fall back on the three-year statute of limitations.

8. Require the surrender of radio, telegraph and other communications records to authorized agents of the government in connection with investigations involving the national security.

9. Make permanent the wartime laws providing $5,000 fine and one year imprisonment for violating military orders aimed at protecting the nation's aircraft, airfields, ships, harbors, ports or other water front facilities.

KILLED AT CROSSING
Dayton, O., Jan. 17 (AP)—William J. Cronin, 27, son of Patrick Cronin of Nanticoke, Pa., was killed yesterday when a Baltimore and Ohio passenger train struck his automobile at a crossing a mile north of Dayton. Cronin, police said, had stopped at the crossing for one train but failed to see the other—a Cincinnati to Toledo express—approaching on another track.

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 17 (AP)—Dr. Oswin W. Berk, 73-year-old former postmaster and Burgess of Bally (Berks county), Pa., died yesterday at Allentown hospital. Widely known in medical circles, Dr. Berk was for many years on the staff of Sacred Heart hospital here.

REMODELING OF CHINA CALLED FOR IN TERMS

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Mao Tse-Tung, hard-boiled and dynamic leader of Chinese Communism, finally has announced his terms for peace with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government.

In effect they call for unconditional surrender and for a complete remodeling of the nation.

The Chinese Stalin projects drastic communication for this country which houses close to a quarter of the world's population. What he envisages is one of the most violent upheavals China has known in its 3,000 years of history.

U. S. Is Chief Enemy
The constitution is to be rewritten in Red. "Bureaucratic" capital is to be confiscated. There are to be land reforms. "Reactionaries" are to be eliminated from government and army. "All 'war criminals' are to be tried, and he names the Generalissimo and Madame Chiang first on the long list.

"Treacherous" treaties with imperialist nations are to be cancelled. This includes abrogation of treaties with the United States.

You understand why Mao singles out America when you know that his chief enemy, next to Chiang's Kuomintang Nationalists, is this because of Uncle Sam's military aid to the Nanking government.

Speaks As Conqueror
Clearly Mao speaks as a conqueror, a position which he may claim as the result of the sweeping victories by the Communist armies. He lays down the terms with arrogance and finality. Chiang can take them or leave them.

The big question is what attitude Chiang will adopt toward this ultimatum. Only so long ago as the year-end the Generalissimo declared that he would make no abject surrender. He would fight it out along the Yangtze river between Nanking and Shanghai so long as possible and then, if defeated there, would withdraw to the great island of Formosa off the coast.

STORM STRANDS MANY IN WEST; HEAVY SNOWS

(By The Associated Press)
The fury of a widespread storm left hundreds of persons stranded yesterday in the Rocky Mountain region and sent southern California into its third week of freezing temperatures.

A Southern Pacific Railroad train was sent out of Lordsburg, N. M., last night to rescue motorists stalled in an estimated 300 cars west of there.

The town's six hotels and eight tourist courts had become jammed and many private homes were taking some of the 500 or 600 extra families already there.

Snow Closes Highway
Snowfalls ranging from 12 inches at Duncan, Ariz., to 19 inches at Morenci had closed U. S. Highway 66 and other roads further south.

A Southern Pacific official said that the relief train had picked up 200 stranded motorists in less than three hours along a 20-mile stretch west of here.

The snowfall in the Northern Rockies was light but high winds whipped the new and old snow into drifts and again blocked the Chicago and North Western Railroad's line between Casper, Wyo., and Chadron, Neb. More than 100 motorists were marooned at Lusk, Wyo.

The new snow measured generally less than three inches.

Wind Causes Damage
Today's freezing temperatures in southern California followed a damaging lake in the area yesterday and the forecast was for colder tonight.

At Mt. Wilson near Pasadena, the gale was measured as high as 80 miles an hour while the nearby area was buffeted by a 60-mile blow. Trees were uprooted and plate glass windows smashed.

Snowdrifts as much as 12 feet deep on some mountain roads had hundreds of motorists temporarily stranded. The winds continued today but with less force.

At Atchison, Kas., a 12-mile long jam in the Missouri River sent the stream flooding ten miles of lowlands. More than 50 families were evacuated from their homes.

Unseasonably mild weather continued over the southeastern and Atlantic seaboard states.

URGE INCOME TAX
Philadelphia, Jan. 17 (AP)—The Progressive Party of Pennsylvania suggested today that a graduated income tax be substituted for the local "tax anything" law. Josiah W. Gitt, York publisher and chairman of the party which supported Henry A. Wallace for president, termed the state's tax system "chaotic" in a statement announcing the party's legislative program.

The "troy" weight comes from Troyes, France, an important trading center where 5,760 grains became the unit for weighing bullion.

UN PLEBISCITE WILL DETERMINE KASHMIR'S FATE

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

We owe the United Nations a debt of gratitude for securing an armistice in the Kashmir crisis which threatened to plunge the Indian peninsula into conflict.

The warring dominions of India and Pakistan—both eager to absorb this huge, rich state—have grounded arms. There is to be a plebiscite to determine which dominion the people of Kashmir wish to join, for it is essential that they attach themselves to one or the other. The British in granting independence to the whole Indian peninsula strongly urged that the principlalities affiliate with one of the dominions.

So the U. N. commission, having made its priedful report at Lake Success, is heading back to supervise the voting. Good luck go with them! they'll need it.

Delicate Situation
A highly interesting but delicate aspect of this situation is that the commission will have to work with the Maharajah of Kashmir, His Highness Sir Hari Singh. He is the autocratic and haughty ruler of some 4,000,000 people. His state, which is one of the world's beauty spots, is nearly as large as Great Britain and provides an annual income running up to $175,000,000.

The position has been complicated by the fact that the vast majority of the population is Moslem, while the prince is a Hindu. That at once presents a clash in interests, since the maharajah's leanings naturally are towards Hindu India whereas his people might be expected to favor Moslem Pakistan.

As things stand, the maharajah's chances of retaining his autocracy would seem to be most precarious. However, he is lucky to have ruled at all, for back in 1923—when he was 28—he got mixed up in a mess which threatened his succession to the throne. That was the notorious "Mister A" black-mail case which involved a bedroom scene in Paris and was tried in a London court.

Prince Got Framed
The youthful prince got framed in one of those "unhand-my-wife-you-villain" plots which, as I recall it, cost him about $750,000 before he called for help.

Of course the blackmailers had to be brought to trial, and the British government did its best to protect the honor of the Kashmir throne and of Prince Hari by suppressing his name. He was mysteriously labeled "Mister A" by the authorities and disclosure of his real identity was officially forbidden. So the reporters of whom your columnist was one worked under wraps until finally the truth leaked out.

Well, conviction for blackmail was secured and the prince was relieved of further pressure from the gang. However, his succession to the throne hung in the balance for a considerable time. Finally Britain and Hari's uncle forgave all and he was taken back into their good graces.

Sir Hari succeeded his uncle in 1925.

The Roman "libra," which was roughly a pound, gives us our abbreviation of "lb" for pound.
